

The Stone Mint Editions: Voices from the Api

The Stone Mint Editions is a unique collection of books that offer a glimpse into the lives of ancient Egyptian scribes and officials. Written on limestone flakes, these texts were discovered in the early 19th century by British explorer John Gardner Wilkinson. The collection includes a wide range of documents, from administrative records to religious texts, and provides valuable insights into the daily life of ancient Egypt.

The Discovery of the Stone Mint Editions

In 1824, Wilkinson was exploring the ruins of Memphis, the ancient capital of Egypt, when he came across a collection of limestone flakes. He recognized these flakes as fragments of ancient Egyptian writing and began to collect them. Wilkinson eventually amassed a collection of over 1,000 flakes, which he sent to the British Museum in London.

The flakes were initially studied by the museum's curator, Sir Henry Rawlinson. Rawlinson was able to decipher the writing on the flakes and determined that they were copies of ancient Egyptian documents. He also discovered that the flakes had been used as a form of currency, known as "stone mints." The flakes were worth their weight in gold and were used to pay for goods and services.

The Contents of the Stone Mint Editions
